Shooting Star is a novel by Karl Sabbagh that tells the story of a young boy named Tommy who discovers a shooting star in his backyard. The novel explores the themes of friendship, family, and the power of imagination.

Tommy is a lonely boy who lives with his aunt and uncle. He has no friends and spends most of his time playing by himself in the backyard. One night, Tommy sees a shooting star fall from the sky and land in his backyard. He follows the star and finds it lying in the grass. The star is still warm and glows with a faint light.

Tommy picks up the star and takes it inside his house. He shows it to his aunt and uncle, but they don't believe him. They tell him that shooting stars are not real and that he must have imagined it.

Tommy is disappointed that his aunt and uncle don't believe him, but he decides to keep the star anyway. He puts it in a jar and keeps it on his bedside table. Every night, Tommy looks at the star and it reminds him of the night he found it. The star becomes a symbol of hope and friendship for Tommy.

One day, Tommy is playing in the backyard when he meets a new girl named Sally. Sally is also lonely and doesn't have any friends. Tommy tells Sally about the shooting star and she believes him. They become friends and spend every day playing together in the backyard.

One night, Tommy and Sally are playing in the backyard when they see the shooting star again. The star falls from the sky and lands in the same spot where Tommy found it before. Tommy and Sally follow the star and find it lying in the grass. The star is still warm and glows with a faint light.

Tommy and Sally pick up the star and take it inside Tommy's house. They show it to Tommy's aunt and uncle, but they still don't believe them.
